Working in Health

The Government has put improving the public's health at the heart of its changes to the NHS. For the first time there will be ring fenced money with local councils taking a leading role to get people fitter and healthier. Anne, who is the Minister for Public Health, said, "It's fantastic to have public health as one of my responsibilities. Our changes have been widely welcomed and people are just keen to get on with them. It's not always easy, but each of us can make a huge difference to our health by making small changes to how we live our lives"

Anne also takes a lead on international health matters. Speaking after the World Health Conference Anne said, "Health is a huge issue across the world and every country including our own has its challenges. Making sure less women die in childbirth to making sure children across the world get the vaccinations are some of the issues that come up at these conferences. But closer to home in Europe it comes down to pretty basic things like not being too fat, drinking less alcohol, getting more exercise and giving up smoking."
